"AI Right Now and In the Future"

Course Description

We will create a day where people walk in with one understanding of AI and walk out seeing their practice, their future, and perhaps even themselves differently. Whether someone needs AI 101, 201, 301, or 601, there will be something meaningful for them. The beginner should walk away thinking, "I can do this." The advanced person should walk away thinking, "I had no idea I could do that."

These are the questions we will answer.

Why does this matter?
What is real right now?
What is hype?
What should I be using today?
How do I start?
What should I wait on?
What is coming next?
Should I be afraid of any of this?

How do I position myself to win in a world that is changing this quickly?

Because I don't want people leaving with 100 AI tools they'll never use. I want them leaving with clarity, confidence, and a roadmap. We'll meet everyone exactly where they are, from the self-described "dinosaur" 😂 all the way through the sophisticated AI nerds.

We'll also spend meaningful time looking forward because by March 2027, AI will be dramatically different from where it is today. I don't simply want to teach people what buttons to push because buttons change, platforms change, and technology changes. I want to teach people how to think about AI. If we can accomplish that, they won't just be prepared for what exists in March 2027, they'll be prepared to adapt to whatever comes next.
